UNDERSTANDING YOUR WORLD

Although the sporting industry is virtually recession-proof and has become increasingly lucrative over the past 40 years,

most athletes fail to see the results of not having a long-term, structured approach to managing their wealth and taxes -

until it is too late.

5 REASONS WHY MOST ATHLETES ARE UNABLE TO MAINTAIN THEIR WEALTH

#1

No Succession Planning

Succession planning is simply about taking steps to ensure that your wealth is properly passed onto the hands of your future generations; instead of letting it slip through your fingers.

#2

Getting the Wrong Advice

It is essential that you find an experienced advisor who can truly understand all your needs and is able to expertly guide you towards achieving your financial goals in the best way possible.

#3

Inadequate Tax Planning

Most people do not worry about their taxes until they are forced to deal with the bill when it comes, and are unaware that planning for your taxes could actually minimise your payments.

#4

Bad Business Investments

Although the investments landscape is everchanging and your returns hinge on various circumstances, failing to strategically manage your risks always costs you more than necessary.

#5

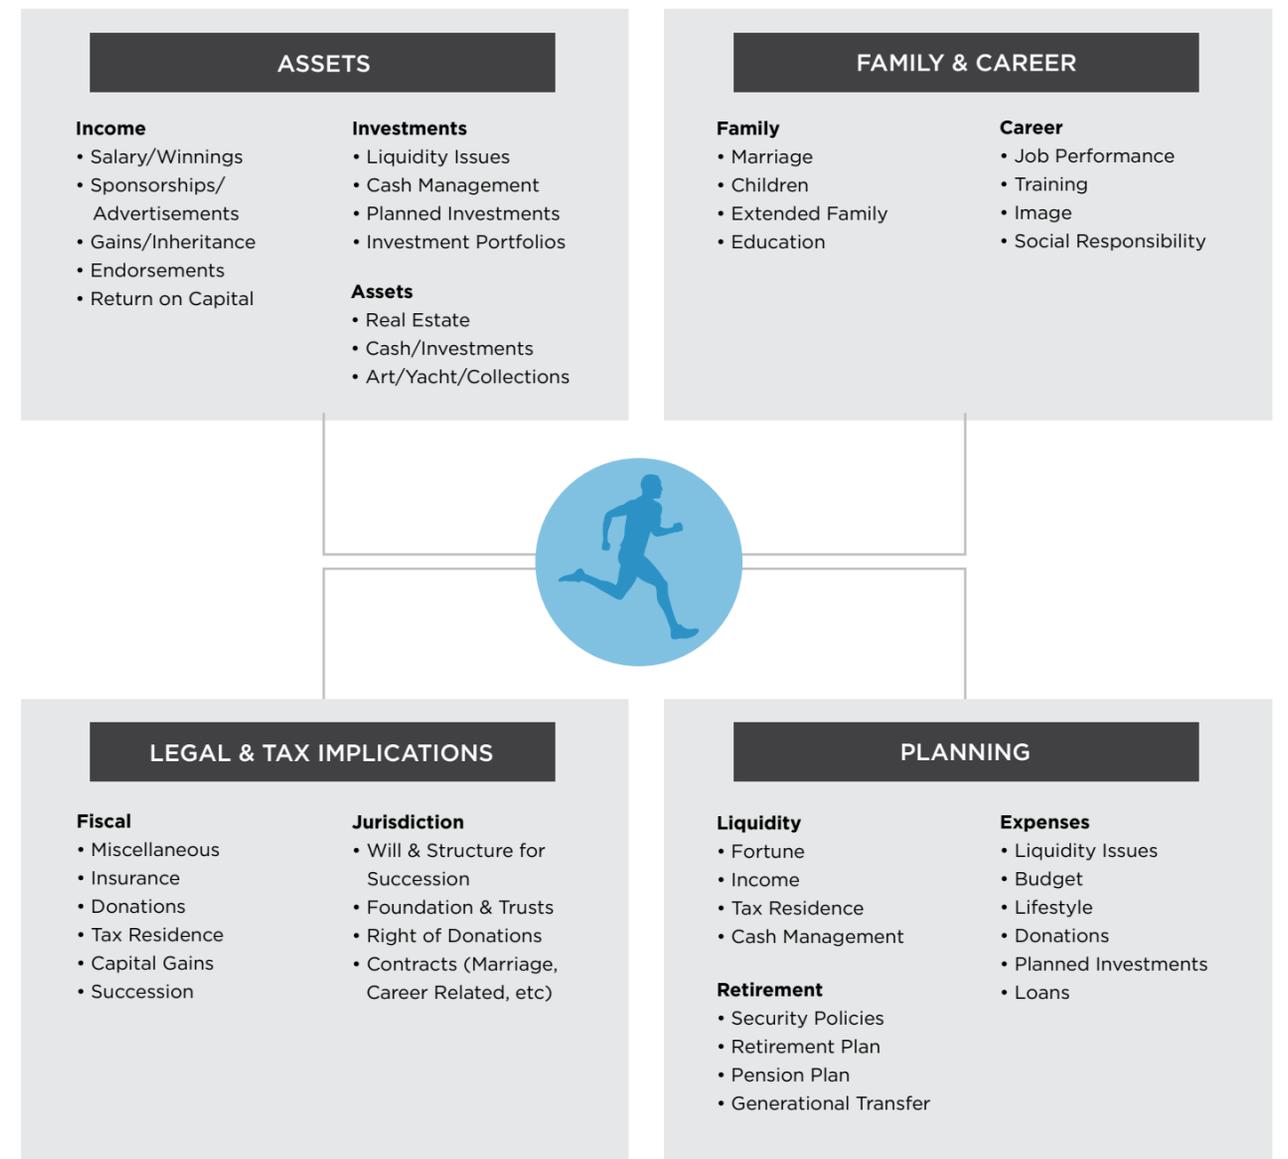

Excessive Lifestyles

There is nothing wrong with living the good life, but too much enjoyment and impulsive indulging without prior planning could unfortunately cause you more problems in the long run.

IDENTIFYING YOUR ISSUES

In reality, there are many complexities surrounding your financial world – some of which are within and some, out of your control. However, regardless of differing individual circumstances, all athletes share the same basic need to plan for the future while dealing with their assets, careers and families as well as the resulting tax and legal implications from all their financial decisions.

STAYING AHEAD OF THE GAME

There are several things you can do to get organised so you can focus on what truly matters in your life – while achieving great financial success. Similar to your sport, it is all about becoming a top performer in the game.

Having a Structured Approach to Financial Planning

Just like your career, your financial plan should not be stagnant. What you need are bespoke plans and strategies that cover your entire sporting career through the various stages because your goals are bound to change.

Managing the Growth of Your Wealth

As your pay package and appetite for investments increase, so will the tax and legal implications attached to them. Proper legal and tax planning should be considered to protect your wealth for your future generations.

Minimising Your Risks

It is hard to guard everything that you have worked so hard for when you choose to invest, but having the right corporate governance and oversight structure can mitigate the risks of loss that you will potentially be exposed to.

Dealing Wisely with Complexities Out of Your Control

Although it may seem daunting to trust outsiders with your financial matters, all you need are advisors who adopt long-term, comprehensive approaches that are transparent and independent; depending on your expectations and needs.

“ To be the best in a challenge, you have to be focused in the game and have a proper plan to win. It is no different for my own finances. To remain the best even after my career, I need to have a focused and planned approach to wealth management that keeps me ahead of the game. ”
